Help us honor the victims of the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory Fire.

On March 25, 1911, a fire at the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory in New York’s Greenwich Village killed 146 garment workers – most of them women, most of them immigrants, many of them teenagers – in the space of 15 minutes.

The Triangle workers were the victims of both their bosses’ cruel indifference and public negligence, but they did not die in vain. Their deaths reinvigorated a fight for decent wages and working conditions that transformed America.

Build the Triangle Fire Memorial to remember and inspire.
Get involved to build the Triangle Fire Memorial.

The Remember the Triangle Fire Coalition brings together groups from all over the world to remember the victims of the 1911 tragedy in which 146 garment workers, most of them young immigrant women, lost their lives. This event seared the nation’s conscience and created a pivotal moment in U.S. labor history that led to historic fire safety and labor law reforms. Although the Triangle Shirtwaist Factory fire was one of the deadliest industrial disasters in U.S. history, there is no permanent memorial to the young women and men who lost their lives. But we at the Remember the Triangle Fire Coalition want to change this by building a permanent public artwork that will both remember the victims of the fire and honor the social and political activism that it inspired.

The design, pictured here, was selected in an international competition by an esteemed jury of architects, artists, and historians. It will be one of the few memorials to honor workers, especially this nation’s women and immigrant workers, and will serve as a reminder that public activism inspires progressive change. As a public artwork, it will be a beacon to the women and men who continue to fight for safer working conditions around the world.

The Coalition has secured the space, at the site of the original fire, and has selected a winning design for the memorial. But this dream will only become a reality with your financial support.

Please consider making a tax-deductible contribution to the Remember the Triangle Fire Coalition at www.rememberthetrianglefire.org/donate to help us build a tribute to the workers who sacrificed their lives and to those who continue to struggle for safe working conditions today.

Thank you for your support.
